The project investigates current models of fashion photography, revealing the technique, tools, lenses and processes that we see in every day media. In their series, they demonstrate how it is possible to explore fashion photography today without having to step into a camera. 1. Fashioning Life(s) I'm often amazed at how our lives are shaped by our surroundings and how we are influenced by all the stuff that we carry with us – clothes, bags, shoes, books, furnishings, vehicles, household equipment, etc. In this series, I'm using my own life as a material to explore the contents of my life through photography. And this is where I will start. What are the things that I take for granted? What does this material contain? What are my habits, my needs and my needs? For me, these are the questions that I am trying to answer here. Please join me as I discover what things I take for granted and as I make decisions to bring them into my life. INTEREST 1.Fashioning Life(s) The fashioning of life. In other words, how we all change ourselves and our surroundings according to our needs, habits, time and money. 2.Chase Club ... is this the life we're leading? The Chase Club is a club for people who live and work in the financial industry. We are interested in the way that the fashioning of lives has become an exclusive club, a club where the prerequisites for membership are money, status, education, connections and families. We are interested in this process in the light of recent and contemporary social shifts such as inequality, financial collapse, digitalisation, temporary work, rapid and frequent mobility and population growth. 3.I'm No Normal ... am I an artist? This series is about the conflicting questions: What kind of artist am I? And how can I answer this question? And who will I be if I don't know? For the answer to these 82157476af
