There's something really annoying to me in the feeling when I'm doing something for the first time (whether it's a task or a new skill). I wonder if you had similar experiences. The task or the new skill is quite simple, yet I'm not doing well in it (such as asking something on this site, or answering a question). I'm really uncomfortable when my lack of skill is being judged (for example when I made a grammatical mistake in an email, or an answer I gave in a forum, or when I struggle to follow the structure of a technical jargon...). I feel like I'm the only one who can do better in the task or the new skill. Do you have anything to add, or any advice that you can give me on how to approach the feeling of feeling bad, in order not to fail, or even fail to get better? A: I can see how this might be frustrating. If you are really having a hard time with a new skill, and you're not sure what to do, my suggestion is not to simply try a bunch of different strategies. Instead, think about how you might feel if the task or skill was somewhat familiar to you, and ask yourself, "If I'd been doing this for a long time, how would I deal with it?" If you are trying something new, then ask yourself "If I was doing this for a long time, what changes would I have made?" It's not f678ea9f9e
